Description of the Course

This year, the course will address some of the current issues of public policy raised by the continuing war in Ukraine and political developments in the United States. The course will also consider the importance of truth, freedom of speech and privacy, and regulation of the internet. The focus will be on exploring public policy issues in a broader political context.

Questions to be Considered

What are the public policy issues raised by the polarization between political parties in the United States and in Europe, and also by the tensions between Russia, China, and the West? Is the gap closing between liberal democracy and authoritarianism? What are the ethical and legal considerations in the interplay between free speech and privacy? How can we meet the biggest challenges caused by climate change?
